ETHIOPIANS READY TO BLOW UP BRIDGES AND DIVERT STREAMS

Frantic in Efforts to Halt The Italians' Rapid Advances To the Southward

NOT TO LEAVE A BRIDGE

Prepare to Send Down Many Huge Landslides Into Enemies' Paths

(By International News Service)

ADDIS ABABA, April 20—Lacking man power and munitions to halt the rapid southward advance of Italy's tanks, Ethiopian military commanders today prepared to blow up bridges and blast away a mountainside to send an avalanche down upon the Roman legions.

All available stores of gun-powder in Addis Ababa were rushed to the road leading from the capital to Dessye. Not a bridge will be left for Marshal Badolio's armored cars to sweep over, according to the Ethiopian plans; streams will be diverted, the roadways into lakes and swamps, and Ethiopians will be stationed above in the passes to touch fuses and blacken the canyon with land-slides.

Many Abyssinian warriors arrived at the capital today ready to start the plan.

The British Legation was besieged with hundreds of nationalities and races camped outside, demanding protection to enter the Legation zone, which is immune from air raids. The Crown Prince is reported to have organized an army to meet the last stand against the forces of Marshal Badoglio.

LONDON, April 20—Abyssinia is conquered! The Italians have their hands on Hailie Selassie's throat, and whether he surrenders or faces death at Italian machine guns. From today's reports we learn that the Abyssinians are not defending the Escarpment, mid-way between Dessye and Addis Ababa.

Just three months ago I took the same route from Dessys to Addis Ababa along where Marshal Badaglio's column is now pushing with the object of capturing Addis Ababa. Even during the dry season it is difficult to surmount the gigantic precipice called Tamba Bur. It rises a mile and a half high and is the finest natural fortification in all Abyssinia.

To defend Tamba Bur would be like defending the top of the Empire State Building against a mob trying to scale its sides. If the Abyssinians do not win at this stand they are at a loss. Reports received here from Addis Ababa assert that the head of Marshal Badoglio's column has already pushed through. The capture of Addis Ababa means the collapse of the Abyssinian defense, because the Emperor wiuld be completely cut off from further supplies and ammunition.

Military observers are impressed by the Italian compaign.

Entertain Friends In Their Newly Furnished Home

On Sunday evening Mr. and Mrs. James Curry entertained their friends at their newly furnished home in Croydon.

The guests included: Mr. and Mrs. John Deny, Croydon; Mr. and Mrs. George Monroe, Tacony; and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sykes and son Joseph, Frankford.

Mr. and Mrs. Deny entertained their friends with a few of the song hits of the day. Mr. Curry entertained by playing a few piano-accordian solos.

Refreshments were served at a late hour.

BELGIAN FORT IS LARGEST IN WORLD

Underground Fort Occupies 125,000 Acres With Passages 150 Feet Deep

IS WELL CAMOUFLAGED

(What does an ultra-modern fortress look like? How has Belgium prepared for a possible new European war? This is the second of an exclusive series of four articles answering these questions.)

By Edward Hunter
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1936, I. N. S.)

LIEGE, Belgium, Apr. 20—(INS)—Probably nowhere else in the world does there exist so large and so modern a subterranean fortress as the one this correspondent visited today in Belgium. The finishing touches of camouflage were being applied. Its surface occupied 125,000 acres. Its occupants gnome-like were prowling through underground passages 150 feet deep.

It was located at Eben-Emael, overlooking the new Albert Canal and the river Meuse, twenty miles west of the German frontier city of Aix-la-Chapelle. Holland was between this fortress and Aix-la-Chapelle, jutting down like a heel into Belgium.

Although the ultra-modern fortifications of the French Maginot line are immensely larger than Belgium's as a whole, it is doubtful if any individual fortress in the French chain is as large or larger than Eben-Emael. A number of these enormous underground fortified cities form the spokes of the wheel for Liege's outer half-moon of defenses. In many ways all are alike, although the topography of the land has been taken into fullest consideration in each case.

Eben-Emael occupies the crest of a cliff just behind the rustic river Meuse. The cliff has been cut down the center to let the new fortified Albert Canal pass through. The back-half of the cliffs has been converted into the fortress.

The moat, that ancient relic of all medieval fortresses, has been retained in this most modern sub-soil city of warriors. The moat encircles the rear of the fort where the land slopes gently upwards to form the cliff. In addition, provision has been made to flood the entire rear of the fort in case an invader should attempt to seize it from behind. A river which flows into the Meuse can be used for this purpose. It now has been diverted to flow underneath the new Albert Canal in its path from the town of Eben-Emael to the Meuse!

The waters of the canal itself would facilitate the flooding, for they are above the level of the town behind the crest.

Meanwhile, flooded from behind, the fort is so equipped that its occupants could lead an isolated existence for months. They even would be able to hear the news each day by radio!

The fort is considered impregnable from the front, for even if an enemy should succeed in crossing the Meuse and the Albert Canal, both fortified too, it would come up against a sheer perpendicular wall. That is the face of the Eben-Emael fortress. It has more eyes than a Buddhist goddess has arms. Each eye conceals big guns.

The Belgian general staff feels confident that attack from the rear would be halted, if not by the flood, most certainly by the guns pointing that direction, also hidden in the rock.

An ancient water-wheel still operates a few feet from the fortress. Eben-Emael fulfills two purposes. It is one of the Liege fortresses, and is the beginning of the Albert Canal fortifications as well.

The waterwheel and the peaceful surroundings of a country village are not marred by this fortress, in the way French scenery is blemished by the Maginot line. There are no grotesque paralell lines of gaping rails thrust endwards into the earth all along the frontier, as in France. Even the camouflage is more natural.

The fortress pokes itself out of the cliff-side with mounds like termite hills. On the top-most mound stands a sentry. The hillside behind is occupied by barracks where a number of big guns can be seen. In spite of the size of this fortress, however, it is so cleverly situated that a tourist driving down the Eben-Emael road would not realize that he was passing a bee-hive of war unless he were told. At best he could only see a concrete greenish-colored protuberance from the earth at one or two spots in the high distance.

The Gentlemen Evidently Do Not Agree

John Henry to John Nance

My Dear John: How long are you going to tolerate that apostasy of the Roosevelt administration to the cardinal principles of the Democratic party and its notorious contempt for the plain terms of the Constitution?

Your friend, John Henry Kirby

John Nance to John Henry

Dear John Henry: Your favor just called to my attention. You can't do everything you want to, and I can't do half what I would like to do. You don't control everybody you would like to, and I am in a similar fix. I think that answers your question.

Sincerely, Jno. N. Garner.

In the correspondence subpoenaed by the Senate Lobby Committee, the two letters quoted above were found which were written by Vice-President John N. Garner and John Henry Kirby, millionaire lumberman and chairman of the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution.

Art Exhibit Attracts Much Interest Here

The art exhibit held by the Bristol Travel Club Friday afternoon and evening was a success and the exhibits held the attention of a large group of people, who showed keen interest in the affair.

The speaker of the afternoon was Miss Rachel Carver, Morrisville. Miss Carver exhibited three oil paintings and three etchings. She gave a talk on etchings, and etched a copper plate.

Percy G. Ford rendered a number of vocal selections.

Participants in the exhibition were: Mary Blanche, portrait in oil; Betty Hill, etchings and dry points; Libbie Lovett, water color sketches; Henry Stauffer, portrait sketches in pastel and oil; Michael Petrick, pencil sketches of dogs and sport cartoons; Mae Brambly, pencil sketches; Mrs. George LaRue, water colors; Miss Carlotte Martin, pen and ink drawings; Mrs. Theodore Megargee, sketches in oil and Mrs. J. J. Willaman, sketches in oil.

The work of Miss Martin was considered outstanding.

Exhibits in photography were shown by Horace Burton and Guy Drumm.

Samples of art were sent by pupils in the seventh and eight grades of the Croydon and Edgely schools.

Large Congregation At Presbyterian Church Service

A congregation estimated at 500 persons attended the service last evening in the Bristol Presbyterian Church, which was the concluding feature of a week's program, marking the 90th anniversary of the church.

The congregations of St. James's, First Baptist and Methodist churches, and the congregation of the Church of Our Saviour, united with the Presbyterians in the program and felicitations were expressed by the pastor of each of the churches taking part in the program.

There was a musical program given by the Bristol Glee Club directed by Andrew McArthur.

The Rev. S. Brooks Knowlton, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, expressed his appreciation at the large gathering in attendance and said that when the invitation was extended to the neighboring churches "a large gathering was anticipated but not a multitude."

A delegation of Hopkins Lodge, I. O. O. F., was also present.

Quints Steal Show In Their Film Debut

Five new stars at one swoop were added to the Hollywood firmament when Darryl F. Zanuck secured the adorable Dionne Quintuplets to head the cast of his "The Country Doctor," the grand new humane-interest picture which is showing at the Grand Theatre today and tomorrow.

Everthing that has ever been said and written about these marvelous babies pales into insignificance beside the actual sight of them playing and cooing, acting real roles in a real story and surrounded by such Hollywood stars as Jean Hersholt, June Lang, Michael Whalen, Slim Summerville and Dorothy Peterson.

A courageous doctor of the Canadian backwoods is the hero of the picture, played by Jean Hersholt. He is a simple, earthly man and the picture follows his triumphs, his tragedies, his near-defeat and ultimate victory as he fights the pains and ills of his people.

Eligibility Slips Are Ready for Girls' Baseball

The eligibility slips for girls' baseball to be held in connection with Youth Week are in the hands of the various ward leaders. Each leader is to hand in no less than nine and no more than 15. These slips must be handed in on Tuesday night at the meeting which is to be held at the home of Mrs. Jacob Schmidt, Jefferson avenue.

All ward leaders are urged to be present at this meeting for at that time all questions concerning the rules of the baseball tournament will be answered.

The schedule for the tournament is as follows:

Wednesday, April 22, at 4.30: First ward vs. Fifth ward; at 5.30, Second ward vs. Croydon.

Thursday, April 23: At 4.30, Third ward vs. Sixth ward; at 5.30, Fourth ward vs. Edgely.

Friday, April 24: At 4.30, Winners of Wednesday games; at 5.30, winners of Thursday games.

Tuesday, April 28, at 4.30: Final game, winners of semi-finals.

PAYS $1.50 FOR FROG

HARRISBURG, April 20—Interesting state expenditures are revealed in auditing sheets passing through the Treasury Department. On a recent expenditure sheet there appeared an item for $1.50. It was for the purchase of "one frog for the pool at the executive mansion."

There will be a card party tonight in the Legion Home given by the American Legion Auxiliary.

P. R. R. TO SPEED UP TRAINS THROUGH HERE

Run Between Philadelphia and New York To Be Made In 97 Minutes

TWO NEW ONES HERE

The trains of the P. R. R. operating through here will be run at faster speed, beginning Sunday, when a new schedule goes into effect with the adoption of daylight saving time. The running time between Philadelphia and New York is to be cut on most hourly expresses from two hours flat to one hour and 40 minutes, with the fastest of them making the trip in one hour and 37 minutes.

Two new trains are to stop here, both being southern trains. One is known as the "Washingtonian" which will leave here at 9.28 a. m., standard time, going south. The other is the "Potomac" leaving here for the south at 12.49 p. m., standard time.

The train which now leaves here for New York daily at 5.54 a. m., is to be discontinued.

Also affected in the speeding up are many of the trains operating in the electrified territory between New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Washington.

The speediest of the New York-Washington trains, "The Congressional," will be stepped up to cover the 225-miles run in 220 minutes, both north and south bound, including six intermediate stops.

The schedules of the "Senator," the "Representative," and the "President" will be cut to cover the New York-Washington run at speeds closely approximating a mile a minute.

Entertain in Honor of Two-Year-Old Daughter

Jennie Bono, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gaspar Bono, 427 Jefferson avenue, was two years old on Sunday and in the afternoon from three to six o'clock she was hostess to a number of little friends. The guests were Gloria Greco, Rose, Mary and Joseph Accardi, Rose Accardi, Joseph Lentini. Older folks present were Mrs. Peter Accardi, Mrs. Anthony Accardi, Mrs. Joseph Lentini, Mrs. M. Ardizzone, Mrs. Gaetano Greco, Mr. and Mrs. James Stallone, Philamina and Fanny Accardi, Mr. and Mrs. Gaspar Bono and sons Anthony, Joseph and Vincent.

Refreshments were served in the dining room and the table decorations were red and white. Jennie received a number of pretty gifts.

Phi Delta Club Meets At Home of Phyllis Werner

Miss Phyllis Werner, 124 Filmore street, was hostess to the members of the Phi Delta Club at her home Saturday evening. Games and refreshments were enjoyed.

Those present were: Caroline Betz, Carrie Worthington, Charlotte Rathke, Anita Zug, Ida Hampton, Norma and Lyla Davidson.

PLANS NEW UNIFORMS

HARRISBURG, April 20 — If Capt. Charles H. Quarles, the new superintendent of the State Highway Patrol, has his way, Pennsylvania's Highway Patrol forces will be outfitted in new uniforms soon. The former assistant commander of the Valley Forge Military Academy had scarcely taken over his duties when he suggested new outfits might be in order for his forces. If the uniforms are changed, it will be a sad blow to Capt. Wilson C. Price, former superintendent, who regarded them as the height of practical styling for the patrolmen.

Mrs. Harry Hinman was chairlady of the card party held Friday evening in the F. P. A. hall, sponsored by the Daughters of America, Council 58.

The game of pinochle was played and prizes awarded.

The highest contestants and their scores were: Miss Mary Helsel, 834; Mrs. Harvey Walters, 831; Mrs. John Bruden, 818; Mrs. Robert Shores, 779; Mrs. Stanley Keers, 762.

Refreshments were served.

FOUR WEDDINGS OCCUR HERE OVER WEEK-END

Two Took Place Yesterday Afternoon in St. Ann's Italian Catholic Church

TWO ON SATURDAY

St. Ann's Catholic Church was the scene of a pretty wedding Sunday afternoon at three o'clock when Miss Fannie Troiani, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emedio Troiani, 4 Lincoln avenue, became the bride of Ralph Whyano, so of Mrs. Katharine Whyano, Bath Road, Bristol, R. D. 1. Rev. Marcellino Romagno, rector of the church, officiated at the ceremony. Mrs. Anthony Russo sang "I Love You Truly," accompanied by Miss Frances Tamburello at the organ. Miss Tamburello also played the wedding march.

Miss Helen Ciotti, Holmesburg, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaid was Miss Mabel Ciotti. The flower girl was Delores Dalfonzo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dalfonzo. The bride was accompanied to the altar rail by two little girls, Veronica Capella, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Capella, and Josephine Ciotti, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Faust Ciotti. The ring-bearer was Fred Mancini, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Mancini. The best man was Joseph Fares, Philadelphia.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of white satin made with a train. The bodice was fashioned with a lace yoke front and back, and Queen Anne style collar. The long sleeves of lace and satin were puffed to the elbow and tight-fitting to the wrist. A satin flower trimmed the neckline in front and a belt finished the waistline in the back. Her tulle veil edged with lace was arranged with a cap of lace trimmed with satin and orange blossoms, and worn with a chin strap, and face veil. Her slippers were white satin and she carried calla lilies.

The maid of honor was attractive in a pink moire gown, made on long close-fitting lines. The skirt had a short train and the long sleeves were puffed at the shoulder. The square cut neckline caught with rhinestone clips, featured the high-standing collar in back and the back of the bodice was trimmed with covered buttons. She wore a silver cloth turban with pink maline face veil, silver slippers and carried pink tea roses, tied with silver ribbon.

The bridesmaid was attired in a gown of blue moire, fashioned like the gown of the maid of honor and she wore silver cloth turban with blue maline face veil, silver slippers and carried yellow tea roses tied with silver ribbon.

The little flower girl, and the two little girls accompanying the bride, were dressed in flapper doll style dresses. They wore pantalettes trimmed with lace and rosebud beading. The bodices were tight-fitting and the long sleeves were puffed from the shoulder to the elbow and tight-fitting to the wrist. The skirts were full and lined with crinoline. Lace and rosebud beading trimmed the bottom of each skirt, as well as the round necklines and paniers. Their large brim satin hats edged with lace, had rosebud beading which tied under their chins. Delores wore egg-shell satin and Josephine and Veronica were attired in dresses of two-tone, peach and egg-shell. Each girl carried colonial bouquets of mixed flowers in blue, peach and yellow tones and they wore white anklets and slippers.

The ring bearer, attired in a black tuxedo suit, carried the wedding ring on a white satin pillow trimmed with lace, satin streamers and orange blossoms.

The reception was held in J. Asta's hall on Pond street, where dancing and refreshments were enjoyed. The happy couple left for Washington, D. C., where they will spend their honeymoon. Mrs. Whyano travelled in a two-piece blue suit with grey accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Whyano will make their home at 426 Jefferson avenue. Both the bride and groom were born in Bristol. Mrs. Whyano attended St. Ann's School. Mr. Whyano is employed at the Pacific Steel Boiler Company. They received many gifts. Guests attending the wedding were from Bristol, Holmesburg and Philadelphia.

A beautiful wedding took place in St. Ann's Catholic Church Sunday afternoon at two o'clock, when Miss Mary M. Morici, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Morici, 238 Franklin street, became the bride of Rocco Manzo, son of Mrs. Frances Manzo, 1106 Beaver street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Marcel-

TEMPERANCE WOMEN HOLD INSTITUTE HERE ON SATURDAY

Local Branches of W. C. T. U. Convene in First Baptist Church

INTERESTING SESSIONS

Reports Given of Work and Two Sketches Are Presented

Nine local branches of the W. C. T. U. including Bristol, Fallsington, Hulmeville, Langhorne, Makefield, Morrisville, Newtown, Solebury and Yardley were represented at the Group Institute held Saturday in the First Baptist Church here.

Mrs. Carrie Headley, president of Bristol Union, in opening the morning session, extended a cordial welcome to the visiting branches to which Mrs. Joseph P. Canby, president of Hulmeville Union, responded.

Miss Emily I. Packer, Newtown, in conducting the devotional service of the morning read from Luke 6:6-11: "The healing of the withered hand by Divine power which earnestly invoked and applied," said she, "will also restore to power and activity spiritual faculties which through disuse have become atrophied and impotent."

The Rev. Howard L. Zepp, pastor of the Baptist Church, at the afternoon session read from Luke 21st chapter, including verses 15 and 19 former containing the promise, "For I will give you a mouth and wisdom which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay or resist," Verse 19, the admonition "In your patience possess ye your souls," carrying on the thought, "A mighty fortress is our God, a never failing source of power."

Vocal solos by Miss Laura Ellis and Mrs. Earl McEuen were enjoyed during the morning. Miss Anna Heritage, director of the Department of Temperance and Missions for Bristol Union, presented a sketch, "White Ribbon Tours, Inc." in which several women reported the very active and successful work being done by W. C. T. Unions in various foregin countries which they had recently visited, including Canada and the British Isles, France, Germany, Switzerland, the Scandinavian countries, China, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, South America, including Brazil, Argentina, Uraguay, Egypt, South Africa, Liberia, Hawaii and many islands of the sea, all this the result of the far-flung vision of Frances Willard in the early years of the W. C. T. U., when "Round the World Missionaries" were sent to "circle the Globe with the white ribbon." The participants in the sketch were: Miss Anna Heritage, Miss Laura Ellis, Miss Jane Rogers, Miss Marie Watson, Mrs. Florence Beswick, and Mrs. Mary Hendricks.

An address by Mrs. Lucy A. Harper, president of Bucks County, and noontide prayer by Miss Packer completed the morning program.

Groups from the Loyal Temperance Legion and Young People's Temperance Council, were present at the afternoon session and after an address by Miss Gladys Harper, county director of Y. T. C., the Baptist group in charge of Miss Marie Watson presented a sketch, "The Cigarette that Jack Had," after the style of "The House that Jack Built." The combined groups sang "The Brooklet," dancing, singing on its way, its laughing, sparkling waters teaching temperance rules.

Slogans and yells were also given. Mrs. Ada B. Sands is in charge of the Presbyterian L. T. L. and Mrs. Florence Beswick of the Y. T. C. Original posters made by the young people were judged and prizes awarded to Virginia Vetter of the Y. T. C. and Gida Masca, of the L. T. L. A very creditable essay on "Alcohol" written as an exercise in school without special preparation was read by the author, Mildred Graham.

Two minute flashes from visiting unions, presented interesting items. Mrs. Marian Ely, president of Solebury, spoke of the distressing prevalence of drinking among young people. Mrs. Joseph P. Canby's contribution was a quotation from the "Los Angeles Times" as follows: "They Do Mix"—"A trite epigram anent drunk-driving accidents has it that gasoline and alcohol do not mix. But they do mix, and as never before. They mix at every intersection. They mix arms and legs with windshields, steering gears, doors, wheels, gadgets, hoods. They mix pedestrians up with the occupants of cars. They mix the victims in arguments, mix statements to police, give mixed accounts to the insurance companies and mixed testimony to the courts. They mix minds and morals . . . and sometimes mates. If you are still unconvinced, listen in on the police radio '3-90' calls over the short wave. There are so many of their disastrous mixtures that the police have had to give them a number."

A five-minute talk by Miss Marian Longshore, Langhorne, county director of peace department, deploring the alarming situation abroad and urging more earnest efforts towards good will among men. Miss Longshore had recently attended a conference of the

BASEBALL

King Baseball regains his throne to reign for another six months in renewed splendor. Of all monarchs he alone as the years roll by loses none of his traditional public favor. For Americans the year comprises five seasons—baseball, spring, summer, fall and winter—but the greatest of these is the season of baseball. What other season of the year is looked forward to with as much expectation and yearning as that of the Great American Game?

Not all of the one hundred and thirty millions of men, women and children in this United States are all-year-round or all-season-round baseball enthusiasts, but is there one who does not realize the triumphant coming of the three great days of the baseball calendar, which are the opening day of the season and the days of the first and last days of the world series? Spring and fall mean little to the baseball fan except that they herald the coming of the first game of the season and of the world series, respectively.

There have been some, albeit few, who have depreciated the greatest sport of the Americans. Have they not overlooked the advantages it provides for millions of humans to get out-of-doors for a part of at least one hot afternoon a week, to thrust themselvs into an all-diverting amusement, to get together as a great community and with one thought? Have the opponents of baseball overlooked the verity that loyalty and patriotism are general, that loyalty to the home team is made of the same cloth as loyalty for peoples, town and country.

It is as natural for people to have their national pastime as to have their religions, political beliefs, and other national characteristics. Baseball is a distinctive characteristic of the American people.

UNLIKE JEFFERSON

Franklin D. Roosevelt now intimates that he bears a striking resemblance to Thomas Jefferson, having previously intimated that he is akin to Jackson, Washington and several other immortals.

But preceding this Jefferson speech was a political parade led by detachments of the United States Army—the first time in the history of the Nation that Federal troops were used by an incumbent politician to boost his own political fortunes.

Was this like Jefferson? Or was it like Mussolini or Hitler?

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol, Oct. 15, 1874. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

Last Friday evening a meeting was held in the Engine House Hall by citizens of the borough interested in organizing a Hose and Hook and Ladder Company. The meeting was called to order by William Hall, and William A. Girton was chosen president and W. H. Wright secretary pro tem. The roll was called to give an opportunity to all present to join the company, it being announced that hereafter persons desiring to become members would be balloted for. The Company then proceeded to the election of officers, Richard Shaw and W. A. Girton acting as tellers. The following persons were elected: Allen Garwood, president; Richard Shaw, vice-president; William H. Hall, secretary; Byron C. Foster, treasurer; Alexander Watson, foreman; Charles Appleton, assistant foreman; Thomas Harkins, John Callanan, William Wright, George Stout, and Budd Mackey, trustees. The name adopted by the Company is the "America Hose and Hook and Ladder Company."

A serious accident happened on Saturday evening, October 3rd, to William R. Woolson, of Bristol Township. He had been to Fallsington, and while returning home near the residence of J. L. Stackhouse, Esq., a carriage containing two young men drove past on the left hand side at a rapid rate, and turning on the road leading to Chickenfoot, collided with Woolson's carriage, throwing him out, fracturing his collar bone, two or three ribs, and inflicting other severe injuries. After partially recovering from the shock, he made his way to his gate, about 50 yards distant, when he found his horse and wagon uninjured with the exception of three or four spokes broken out of one of the front wheels. He drove on down home, was assisted in the house by the family and his family physician. He became delirious and for several days his life was despaired of. He is now apparently slowly recovering.

Elias Gibbs, residing on Wood street, an employee of the Pennsylvania Railroad, was struck by a coal train at Cornwells station on last Monday evening and had his ankle broken, his head severely cut, and his body considerably bruised. He was brought to his home and is now, we understand, in a fair way to recover.

A grand parlor entertainment will be given by the friends of the Delaware Quadrille Band at Cabeen's Hall on next Thursday evening . . .

A Sciopticon Exhibition, for the benefit of the Bridgewater Presbyterian Sabbath School, will be given in the Presbyterian Chapel at that place on next Monday evening.

The skirt trade is lively. Recently C. W. & J. Peirce, proprietors of the Livingston Mills, sold and delivered 1200 dozen of ladies' felt skirts in one week.

This morning a coal boat, while lying at Bristol caught fire and burned up the cabin. The fire is supposed to have originated from the stove in the cabin.

There have been from time to time numerous projects for the establishment of a public library in the borough—all of which, born merely of a vague desire to do something for the general welfare, died in the embryo from absence of that essential, vital force that can only come of a daily personal realization of the necessity for the work desired. In the report in the last issue of the Gazette of the meeting for the organization of a company under the above name which sufficiently indicates its purpose, we find in the men appointed to its management sufficient guarantee of success . . .

The steamboat "John A. Warner" has changed its time, and now makes but one trip a day. Leaves Bristol at 7.45 a. m., and returning, leaves Chestnut street wharf at 2 p. m., arriving at Bristol at 4 p. m.

NEWPORTVILLE—A very severe hail storm swept over this section of the township on Wednesday morning, and increased in violence to such an extent that three miles east of this town the people were compelled to seek shelter from the stones.

Protracted meetings have been held in the Neshaminy Church for several weeks past, and a number have been converted and there are still many anxious inquirers. Rev. Mr. Collom, the pastor of that church, is laboring industriously for the spiritual welfare of his congregation.

WARMINSTER—On Thursday morning last, as the Hatboro train approached Erie avenue, near the City, it was run into by a New York freight train upsetting several of the cars and breaking them badly; there were several passengers on the train from this neighborhood, but none were seriously hurt.

Belgian Fort Is Largest In World

That is all he probably would see even if he took a boat through the Albert Canal in front of the fortress. Nothing would suggest a city with its own electric light plant, hospital, kitchens, storehouses, elevators and homes! Yet there are more than a few of the modern conveniences in this underground town.

(The next article in this series will describe this new fortified canal stretching all along the northern frontier of Belgium.)

"THERE'S MURDER IN THE AIR"

by ROY CHANSLOR

CHAPTER XVII

In the cool of the early morning, before even the servants were stirring, Nat rose. He whistled as he shaved, took a tingling shower, donned a business suit. He had made a decision, and the prospect of action pleased him.

When he had made all his preparations, he knocked softly at Tyler's door; then at his employer's quick, "Come in," Nat pushed his way into the room, and grinned at Tyler's look of astonishment at sight of his city clothes.

"I'm running into town to check up on a little hunch," Nat explained. "Please make my excuses to the family and tell them I'll be back this evening. Stall Gordon if he gets curious. Say it's a business matter."

Tyler nodded. "And what about my own curiosity?" he smiled. "Is this hunch a secret?"

"Not exactly," said Nat. "It's about the mysterious Mr. Gaudio. I'll want to spend considerable time in the files of one of the newspaper morgues. I suppose you could fix that by a phone-call?"

"Certainly," said Tyler. "I'll give the city editor of the Star a ring. He'll give you the freedom of the reference-room."

He glanced inquiringly at Nat, but did not question him.

"Here's the hunch," said Nat: "It may be all wet, but I think it's worth riding. The mention of this Gaudio by young Gordon means something. And the fact that your friend Crandall, who's by way of being a walking encyclopedia on crime and criminals, has never heard of him, or at least doesn't recall the name, means even more."

"It may be the key to the whole business," Tyler agreed.

"Well, my hunch is this," Nat said: "Gaudio belongs to Gordon's past, that peculiar past which seems to extend back only to 1916. If my hunch is right, Gaudio, for some reason, heaven knows what, wants to do away with Gordon. It must be a mighty powerful reason to have lasted all these years. The Gordons know that reason, all right, but they're darned well determined that no one else shall."

Tyler nodded, interested.

"If Gordon were a different sort of man," Nat continued, "I'd say his extreme secrecy was pretty good evidence he had something shady to hide. Possibly a criminal record—and an underworld feud growing out of that. But if I'm any judge of character, Paul Gordon didn't come from the underworld. There's breeding in the man—and integrity."

"Right," Tyler agreed. "He's a gentleman."

"But I do believe, from what little the Gordons let out before they were on guard, that Gaudio is actually the man behind this underworld threat they fear." Nat resumed. "What I don't believe for a minute, is that this threat is the result of Gordon's campaign against gangsters. That's a red herring. Why they should draw it across our trail, I don't know. That's what I hope to find out."

"That's all very well," said Tyler. "But how do you propose—"

"I propose to search the files before 1916 for the name Gaudio," Nat interrupted. "Paying particular attention to Chicago news stories. And to pictures. It's my hunch that the Gordons were involved somehow with a man named Gaudio, probably in Chicago, and almost surely before 1916."

He paused and then added, significantly:

"And here's the point: A man of Gordon's present wealth and power could cope with any known enemy, unless that enemy has something on him. We don't think Gordon is that kind of man. Therefore the present identity of that enemy, who must be Gaudio, is not known to Gordon. Because if he were, Gordon would have him behind the bars in short order. That can only mean that the man who was called Gaudio, who was known to the Gordons as Gaudio, is now no longer known under that name. And whatever identity he has since assumed, is not known to the Gordons."

"I believe you've hit it!" Tyler exclaimed. "The Gordons think Gaudio is the mind behind their peril. And yet they can't lay hands on him. Because he has covered his tracks so well! So, in effect, he is actually an unknown enemy. Which makes their problem mighty tough."

"Right," agreed Nat. "Gaudio has changed his name and identity, and unless I'm very much mistaken, the Gordons have changed theirs. But Gaudio has the particular advantage of knowing their secret, while they simply don't know his. They are tangible targets while he—is just a shadow."

Only a single window in the great house was lighted as Nat turned the car at the entrance to the estate and came to a stop to wait for Cooke to open the gate. With satisfaction he saw that it was Gordon's window.

Cooke turned a powerful flashlight on him from the security of the lodge, and Nat grinned reassuringly and identified himself. Cooke called a greeting to him, and the gate swung open.

After forty-eight hours a man did come for the money and they trailed him.

As Nat swung around the house, he saw that the lights in the living-room of the cottage were on. Tyler was waiting for him. Nat put the car away. As he came out of the garage, he heard the music for the first time.

Ruth was up in her dark room, playing. He stopped, gazed at the window. She was playing softly, serenely. And yet his spine tingled, as it always did, probably as it always would, at the sound.

Tyler syrang to his feet eagerly, as Nat entered the cottage. His eyes went to the manila folder under Nat's arm.

"I've got it," Nat said quietly.

Tyler curbed his curiosity as Nat hung up his hat, then going to the phone, called Gordon's private number. Gordon himself answered.

"This is Benson," Nat said. "There's something of the utmost importance. We must see you at once. . . . No, no, it has nothing to do with the music. . . . What? No, it would be better if you came here. . . . Yes. Alone, please. . . . Thank you. We'll be expecting you."

He hung up and returned Tyler's questioning glance. "If you don't mind waiting just a minute?" Nat said.

Tyler nodded. Above them, Ruth still played softly, another song now. Nat raised an inquiring look toward the sound.

"She's been playing for ten minutes or more," Tyler said. "No interruption, though. I think the music soothes her."

The two men fell silent, waiting. Presently they heard Gordon at the door. Tyler admitted him. He had replaced his dinner jacket with a black velvet smoking-coat.

The man sat down, after a searching look at Nat's face. Nat paced up and down as he began to talk, hardly glancing at Gordon. Tyler, however, never took his eyes from the man's curiously inexpressive features.

"I've spent the whole day and evening in the files of the New York Star's morgue," Nat began. "I was looking for one Gaudio. I found him."

Tyler, watching Gordon, saw no change in the man's countenance.

"I just had a hunch," Nat went on. "And that hunch was that I might find that name in newsstories out of Chicago—some time before 1916. . . . I did."

He turned and looked squarely at Gordon for the first time. There was a flicker of the man's eyes, no more. The face was a mask. He did not even nod for Nat to continue. He just waited. Nat resumed his pacing.

"Joe Gaudio," he said, "was convicted in the year of 1915, in the city of Chicago, together with his brother Vito, and their father Tony, of the crime of kidnaping. The victim was an eight-year-old boy, the son of a wealthy resident of the city, James Moridon."

He stopped and again looked at Gordon. The man was looking straight ahead, as if not seeing. Nat, standing quiet now, facing Gordon, resumed:

"The Gaudios demanded one hundred thousand dollars' ransom, and threatened death to the boy if the police were notified. James Moridon did, however, notify the police; but he made very sure that this did not leak out. He left the ransom money, unmarked, at the spot designated by the kidnapers. Detectives watched, with orders to follow whoever came for the money, but to make no move until the boy was safely returned.

"After forty-eight hours a man did come for the money, and they trailed him. The boy was returned safely. And next day the three Gaudios were arrested. Shortly after their conviction, which was speedy, the three men, with the aid of underworld friends, made a spectacular jail break. In the fight which followed this, Tony Gaudio and his son Vito were killed. Joe Gaudio escaped."

Gordon, who had been sitting stiffly on the edge of his chair, now sank back and passed a hand over his face.

"Within a week," Nat continued, "the house of James Moridon was bombed. His wife was killed. Moridon himself, his son and his baby daughter, were miraculously uninjured. Moridon, nearly frantic with grief, posted a reward of one hundred thousand dollars for the capture of Joe Gaudio. The country was ransacked. He was not found. Within another week, despite a heavy police guard, Moridon was twice shot at through the windows of his home. Then an attempt was made to kill his son. The very next day James Moridon, his son and his infant daughter disappeared."

NAMES in the NEWS

ONE of the first things a cub reporter learns is that names make news. There are two kinds of names which make news. Names of people. And names of things — products and services — things which touch you more closely than the thunderings of a Senator or the escapades of a Prince.

Look through the advertisements in this newspaper and you'll see names you've known most of your life. Dependable names—names that stand for value — announcing improvements in quality, improvements in service, new and better ways to perform old household tasks, ways to save money and raise your standard of living.

Follow the news those names are making, day after day. Read the advertisements regularly, and use them as millions of other people are doing—to keep up-to-date in the world of goods and services; to save time, effort and trouble in shopping; to help budget your expenditures and get the most for your money.

lino Romagno, rector of the church, and Miss Frances Tamburello, Dorrance street, rendered Lohengrin's Wedding March on the organ as the bridal party entered the church. Miss Tamburello was accompanied by Fred Norato, Dorrance street, at the violin. Percy G. Ford, Jackson street, sang "Because," "I Love You Truly," and "O Promise Me."

The bride was attended by a matron of honor, Mrs. Leo Bertolami, and four bridesmaids, Miss Edith Norato, Miss Josephine Colella, Miss Katharine Moceri and Miss Jennie Morici, sister of the bride. The best man was Dominick Genova, and the ushers were Frank Rago, Dominick Many and John Morici, brother of the bride.

Mr. Morici gave his daughter away in marriage. The bride was gowned in white bridal satin made on Princess lines, the long skirt ending in a train three yards in length. The neckline was cut V-shape in front with high standing collar in back. The sleeves were shirred at the shoulders, puffed to the elbow and tight-fitting to the wrist. The waistline was trimmed with white satin cording. The bridal veil of tulle, was cap shape, with a crown of lace trimmed with pearls and orange blossoms. She wore doe skin slippers and carried calla lilies.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Bertolami, was attractive in a white satin gown also fashioned on Princess lines and the skirt ended in a short train. She wore a short lace jacket which fastened in front with four small satin covered buttons. The jacket was made with high standing collar and the sleeves were puffed to the elbow and tight to the wrist. Her slippers were white and her satin turban was trimmed with a braid of satin. She carried calla lilies.

The bridesmaids were gowned alike in white satin. The dresses were made like the matron of honor's gown, and they wore short satin jackets fastened in front with four satin covered buttons. The jackets featured the high standing collars and long sleeves. Each girl wore white slippers, white satin turbans trimmed with a white gardenia and carried calla lilies.

A reception was held in Mutual Aid Hall, Wood street, with 500 guests attending. Dancing was enjoyed and a local orchestra furnished the music. Guests attending the wedding were from Bristol, Holmesburg, Philadelphia, Tacony, Trenton, N. J., New York City and Niagara Falls, N. Y. The couple left Sunday evening for their honeymoon and will be away one week. The bride travelled in a dark blue tailored suit with accessories to match. Mr. and Mrs. Manzo will reside in their newly furnished home at 331 Jackson street.

The bride and groom have been residents of Bristol all their lives, and attended the public schools. Mrs. Manzo is employed at the Blue Moon hosiery mill in Croydon and Mr. Manzo is employed by the State. The couple received many beautiful gifts.

The marriage of Miss Helen M. Morganti, 2006 Trenton avenue, to Phillip Paolella, 333 Penn street, took place Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in St. Ann's Catholic Church, with Father Marcellino Romagno, rector of the church, officiating. Miss Frances Tamburello played the wedding march and Percy G. Ford, rendered three vocal solos, "Oh Promise Me," "I Love You Truly", and "Because."

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Mary Morganti, and the best man was Fred Varrati.

The bride was attractive in a gown of white satin fashioned on long, graceful lines, with a pleating of the material arranged to give the effect of a standing collar at the neckline. The bodice featured long sleeves and satin-covered buttons trimmed the back. A satin flower was worn at the neckline in front. The long skirt ended in a train. The bridal veil of tulle was arranged simply about the head and trimmed with a beaded ornament. She wore white satin slippers and carried calla lilies.

Miss Mary Morganti was attired in a sleeveless gown of pink lace, cut low in the back. An organdie pink and blue flower trimmed the neckline in front. With this was worn a three-quarter length jacket of lace made with short puffed sleeves. She wore a blue maline turban with pink face veil, blue moire slippers and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

A reception was held at the home of the groom on Penn street. Mr. and Mrs. Paolella left Saturday evening for New York City where they will spend their honeymoon. The bride travelled in a black suit trimmed with Lappan fur collar, peach color blouse, black hat and slippers and white kid gloves. Mr. and Mrs. Paolella will reside in their newly furnished home at 269 Monroe street.

Both the bride and groom were born and raised in Bristol and Mrs. Paolella gradnated from Bristol High School with the class of 1933. Mr. Paolella is employed at the Corona Leather Works. The couple received many pretty gifts.

Guests attending the wedding were from Bristol, Tullytown, Florence, Trenton, New York and Camden.

Miss Katherine Manzo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cosimo Manzo, 830 Jefferson avenue, and Authony DiTanna, son of Mr. and Mrs. James DiTanna, 315 Brook street, were united in marriage on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock in St. Ann's Catholic Church. Rev. Father Marcellino Romagno, rector of the church, performed the ceremony and Miss Frances Tamburello played the wedding march as the bridal party entered the church. Miss Elizabeth Scordio, sang "I Love You Truly."

The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Angelina Indelicato, as maid of honor; Miss Margaret Scordio and Miss Jennie DiTanna, sister of the groom, as bridesmaids. The flower girl was Anna Marie Greco, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Greco, and the ring bearer was Thomas Ferranti, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Ferranti. Serving the groom as best man was Joseph Margiotti, a cousin of the bride. The usher was Joseph Capizzi.

The bride was beautifully gowned in white satin made on close-fitting lines. The bodice was made with a lace yoke and featured a lace Queen Ann collar. The sleeves of satin and lace slightly puffed at the shoulder, were long and made of satin, ending in points at the wrists. The skirt formed a long train. Her veil of tulle, edged with lace was arranged with a small cap effect, the latter trimmed with satin and orange blossoms. She wore white moire slippers and carried Easter lilies.

The maid of honor, Miss Indelicato, was attractive in a pale pink taffeta gown fashioned on close-fitting lines. The bodice was made with short puffed sleeves and Queen Anne style collar and the long skirt had deep accordian pleating in the back. A sash of pink and blue taffeta encircled the waistline. Miss Indelicato's turban was of blue maline edged with satin and her long lace gloves and shoes were of the same tone. She carried a bouquet of deep pink roses.

The bridesmaids, the Misses Scordia and DiTanna were attired in gowns of blue taffeta made exactly like the maid of honor's. Their accessories were pink and each carried bouquets of pink roses.

The little flower girl was charming in a dress of yellow georgette, made with round neckline, short puffed sleeves and the skirt was trimmed with three ruffles of rose-buds made of the material. She wore a small rosette of yellow ribbon on each shoulder, yellow anklets, white slippers and yellow rosette on her hair. She carried a small basket filled with a mixed bouquet of Spring flowers.

The little ring-bearer was attired in white satin trousers, black satin jacket and carried the ring on a heart-shaped white satin pillow trimmed with lace and white satin streamers.

Following the wedding, a reception was held in J. Asta's Hall, Pond street, where a local orchestra furnished the music for dancing. The hall was decorated in pink and blue. About 400 guests were present from Bristol, Philadelphia, Burlington and New York.

Mr. and Mrs. DiTanna left Saturday evening for four days' honeymoon trip to New York. Mrs. DiTanna travelled in a two-piece powder blue suit and wore grey accessories. Upon returning, they will reside at 327 Brook street. The couple are recipients of many gifts.

The bride and groom were both born in Bristol. Mrs. DiTanna attended St. Ann's Catholic School, while Mr. DiTanna attended the public schools and is employed at the William H. Grundy Company, Inc.

SOME FASTEST SPRINTERS TO COMPETE IN PHILA.

By Mathew Oates
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA, April 20—(INS)—Some of the fastest sprinters in the United States, all considered Olympic possibilities, will compete in a specially arranged 100 meter race at the 42nd annual University of Pennsylvania relay carnival, April 24 and 25.

Originally scheduled for one heat with six competitors, the event has been increased to two heats and a final because of the eniarged number of entrants. Three runners from each heat will qualify providing the 11 now entered run. If less than that number participate only two in each heat will move into the final.

Included in the list of competitors are a western conference title holder, a national A. A. U. champion and a southwestern conference spring victor, an I. C. 4 A. indor dash winner and a high point scorer in championship meets.

Heading the list is Jesse Owens, negro flash of Ohio State who broke three world's records and tied a fourth in the conference championships; Eulace Peacock, Temple University negro star and National A. A. U. 100 meter and broad jump titleholder; Harvey Wallender, Taxas University, southwest conference champion in the 100 and 220 yard dashes, and Arthur Thomas, Pittsburgh I. C. 4 A. indoor spring champion.

Others scheduled to run include Jack Dalton, Navy's brilliant sprinter; Samuel Stoller, of Michigan, third in the western conference last spring; Harry Woodward of Duke, second in the southern conference hundred last year; Arthur Jannell, Fordham, second in the indoor I. C. 4 A. spring; Paul Mingee, William and Mary, who four times last season and once this season has run the hundred in ten seconds; Allen Tolmich, of Wayne University, Detroit, and H. B. Reeves, of Texas University.

Owens, Dalton, Wallender, Stoller and Woodward will run the first heat with Peacock, Jannell, Thomas, Mingee, Tolmich and Reeves in the second.

Car Driven 100,000 Miles To Be Exhibited Here

How far can an automobile be driven without engine wear? Local auto men and motorists will have an opportunity to examine a Chevrolet driven the equivalent of 10 years of average motoring with almost no engine wear, according to E. E. Baker. It is being sent here by The Atlantic Refining Company.

The car was driven 100,000 miles recently at Toms River, N. J., and is one of a fleet of six low priced stock cars which traveled the equivalent of four trips around the world, each without repair to any lubricated motor part. The cars were used by the oil company to test an oil capable of bearing 15,000 pounds pressure per square inch, three times average. According to Atlantic engineers average maximum cylinder wear was seven ten-thousandths of an inch—one third the thickness of a human hair. The cars required no repair to any lubricated motor part, no carbon removal, no piston ring changes and were almost in new car condition at the end of their test.

Widespread public interest has been attracted to the tests for the reason that engineers believe the high film strength oil developed under the supervision of Dr. T. G. Delbridge, research director of The Atlantic Refining Company, can save American motorists at least $50,000,000 a year in motor upkeep costs.

The car may be seen at Weed Chevrolet Co., April 20, 21, 22, today, tomorrow and Wednesday and in the evenings.

EDGELY

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lodge announce the marriage of their daughter, Edith, to Mr. Alfred Rothstein, of Trenton, N. J.

The couple were married in Pound Ridge, N. Y., April 24th, 1935. Mr. Rothstein is a graduate of Trenton High School and also attended Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J., for three years.

Msr. Rothstein is well known here, having lived here most of her life, and has a host of friends.

The couple will reside with the bride's parents on Haines Road.

The Edgely P. T. A. is going to hold a youth week card party tomorrow night in the Edgely school. Mrs. Roy Moon, chairwoman of the committee, would appreciate as many cakes and prizes as possible. The co-operation of the public to make this a big success will be appreciated.

Miss Alice Wolvin, Mrs. Albert Lodge and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Rothstein motored to New York, Thursday, where they spent the day visiting friends.

"Women's International League for Peace," at Harrisburg where it was reported that the W. C. T. U. had secured more signers to the "People's Mandate to Governments" to renounce war, than any other organization.

The address of Miss May Mackin, field worker for the national W. C. T. U., followed. Miss Mackin devoted much of her time to the subject of Peace, now upper-most in the minds of thoughtful people to whom the threat of war is so horrible and urged the importance of bringing pressure to bear on law-makers and executives. Miss Macken told also of the alarming increase and menace of drinking among young people of which she sees and hears so much in her travels through many states, a direful prospect for future generations.

DURING A DROUGHT, INDIAN TRIBES DANCED TO THE RAIN GODS. THEY POURED WATER ON THE GROUND AS A SYMBOL, MORTIFIED THE FLESH AND DANCED UNTIL IT RAINED OR UNTIL THEY WERE OVERCOME BY EXHAUSTION.

SOME AUTHORITIES CLAIM THAT THE CEREMONY OF LAYING A CORNERSTONE IS TRACED TO ANCIENT RITES OF ENTOMBING A HUMAN SACRIFICE IN THE WALLS OF A NEW EDIFICE, SO THAT THE GODS WOULD LET IT STAND.

DURING THE DARK AGES, JEALOUS WOMEN WOULD MAKE A DOLL RESEMBLING THE HATED RIVAL, AND CUT OFF THE HANDS TO CAUSE THE RIVAL TO LOSE THE USE OF HER HANDS.
